THE RECENT DEATH IN THE GAOL

Hon. H. E. Wodehouse resumed his enquiry esterday afternoon into the death of a Chinese prisoner who died in Victoria gad on the 7th nat. The jurors were :- Mosers. J. Armstrong, D. Wood, and E. Sequiera,

From the evidence on the last occasion it appeared that deceased had undergone a considerable number of punishments during the time he was in good, the following being the list put in : 8th July, 8 days rice and water; 11th July 3 days rice and water : 15th July, 3 days rice in and water; 22nd July, 2 days rice and water to receive 12 strokes of the rattan; 18th August; 3 days rice and water : 20th August, 3 days rice and water: 24th August, 8 days rice and water 12th September, 8 days rice and water, 1 September 2 days rice and water : 21st Sept. days rice and water ; 2nd October, 9 days rice and water: 17th October, to lose his supper: 21st October, 8 days rice and water,

Dr. Marques said—The prisoner was admi ted to the Gael on the 7th July. I put him light labour for a week. On the 14th July he was put on hard, labour putil the 5th August. This was crank labour, the heaviest kind of labour, which is given for punishment. On the 5th August he was again put on lighte lab ur till the 20th August. On that date he was again put on hard labour until the 27th August. He was again put on light labour until the 13th September, when be went on hard labour and remained so till he was sent to H spital.

A question of some interest has arisen in connection with the status of Hongkong junks, a foreign charterer of a junk loaded with kerosine claiming that the cargo should pay dues and duties according to the foreign tariff, and that as a chartered junk the vessel should pass its cargo through the Foreign Customs, which would enable the consignee to obtain transit pass and avoid payment of the heavy Ching-fei now levied at Kowloon; amounting to some 40 cents a casa.

A ramour of a highly important nature has II. Steam Laundry ... found its way down from the capital, and is extensively talked about amount the natives in the city. It is to the effect that in consequence of the very precarious state of the health of Prince Ch'un, the Emperor's father, it has been decided to translate Li Hung-chang from the Chibli Viceroyalty to the Conneil of State and enrol him amongst the members of the Chun Ohi 2'a Ch'en. The post vacated by him will, is said, be conferred on Liu Jui-fen, late Minister to the Court of St. James, and at present Governor of the Canton Province. Some however seem to think this bardly likely such rapid promotion as that from Provincial reasurer to Viceroy of Chilli and Guardian of the Throne has never been heard of .. Prior to Liu's appointment as Minister he was Provincial ressurer of Kinngsi: he was, it is true, on his return gazetled Governor of Canton, but has only recently left for his post, which he could hardly be said to have taken up, were he now to be recalled to step into the shoes of the great Chung-tang. It is considered more probable that Li Han-chang will be invited to succeed his brother, and it is urged in support of this theory that nobody but a member of the Li family could maintain a proper control over the troops here. The hold that even Li himself has over them is none of the strongest, as was shown by the Lutsi effeir, but they would be more disposed to yield obedience to one of his family than to an outsider. Li Han chang would of course require a very strong man to stand by him in the way he should go, and would be difficult to find such a one amongst, the olass from which Vicerova secretaries are usually drawn. It is said that Chang Pei-lun, of Loochow notorioty, is a chief counsellor under the present recime, but in how far this is true I am nuable to say Should this ramour have any foundation in fact, we may look for great results. "THIS MAN WAS FRIGHTENED.

And on reading the facts it will appear that he had reason to be. The man referred to was Edward Perrin, a guard on the Manchester. Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway. In September, 1887, he met with an accident, which gave a temporary shock to his system. Not long afterwards he began to feel a pain in the chest and have difficulty in breathing, and threw an a great deal of mucus (phlegm). He at once concluded he had some sarious silment of the lungs, and sought medical advice. The doctor said it was so, and added that there was no cure for it, and that he could do no more than give him something to esse the pain and the cough. Then the dector gave Mr. Perrin a certificate stating that he was suffering from "Catarrh Phthiais," which is the professional term for that dreadful malady, Consumption. Further symtoms soon appeared which seemed to confirm this alarming opinion. The poor fellow experienced great pain in eating and a tightness across the chest which felt, he said, "as if some strong man was gripping him around the body under the arms

The rest of Mr. Perrin's narrative is best related in his own words. He says: " I soon commenced to have a brackish taste in the mouth as if I had been sucking copper. Then came cold chills and sweats in turn, the cough got hollow, and I raised more than I had done These terrible symptoms so scared me that I went and consulted the late Dr. Dacre Fox. who was at that time Consulting Physician to the Railway Company and to the Infirmary. He examined me carefully, and certified as "In the case of Guard Perrin. This man is oridently frightened. He is suffering from Phthisis and Dyspensis. Cod liver oil and iron

"This fully bore out what the other doctor had said, so I now looked upon myself as done for I took everything I could hear tell of have drunk gallons of cod liver oil and sherry. and have had many quarte of camphorated oil rubbed on my chest, until my wife was sick of rubbing. I was also poulticed continually, but in spite of all this terrific dosing and medicating I got gradually worse: An half-a-dozen words my condition was this: I believed myself to be fast going to the grave with consumption; my friends said so, the dectors said so, and it looked like it if soything ever did. It is understood that consumption is sure death, and I made up my mind for that awful end. I had been of my work from 1887; to 1888. I was ashamed to be away so much, as I was obliged to draw funds from the Club all the time to help to supporting family. "While I was thus doing nothing but waiting to die crawling about feebly like a man who has virtually done with this world. I happened one day to meet Impector Rippon, of Ardwick Station, one of the Traffic Tuspectors of our line. He was shocked at my looks, but said, Perrip, I don't know as anything will help you; but, if anything will, it is Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup. I remember that this idea amused me, miserably broken and ill as I was. Help me? Could it cure consumption? Not likely. Impossible! Still it couldn't make me worse, and so I got a bettle, and began to take it. I could scarcely credit my own feelings, but as sure as truth, before I had used up that bottle more bottles and went back to work, and have been sound and healthy ever since. Litold the doctor about it, and although he saw I was well, he seemed displeased. 'You say Mother Seigel's ... Curative Syrup cured you? he said. "Nonsense. It is only a quack medicine; it is nothing but stuff and rabbish. Well, all right, said to myself, it may be stuff and rubbish. Barometer 1 P.m., 50.14 Therm. 1 Prm. (Wet bulb) 57 but it has made a sound man of me after that for thousands of others in this country. "I am exposed to all sorts of weather, but have never had a return of the bad breathing. pheet pains nor any of the other symptoms that nearly frightened me out of my senses. I est and enjoy my food as well as any man in England. Now, what was the secret of this getting well? If I really had consumption, it was nothing short of a miracle; but I never had consumption at all. The doctors were all wrong in calling it that. What I notually suffered from was indigestion and dyspepals, which causes the same, symptoms that mark true consumption : hence lots of people who are supposed to have lung complaint might be as easily cured as I was if they would let cod liver oil alone and take Mother Seigel's Syrup."

CHAPTER XIX.—Continuel. "Ah, here you are, Mr. Clitheroo," Morson said as he slighted. " I am not long after you. you see. I gave you an hour and a helf's start. and I suppose you have not been here very long. I have done it in an hour and forty minutes." "We have only been in a quarter of an hour." Philip said, as he knocked the ashes out of his pipe, and led the way into the hotel and up to s private sitting-room, where the ladies were awaiting them.

Morson's manner had changed. He had thought the matter over, and made up his mind that the game he had played for was lost. He did not in the slightest degree believe Philip's that there was big money to be made out of it mind as to what would come of it. You must assertion that he was not the author of the letter "he received. .. " Of cours - it came from him." he said to himself; "who else could have sent it? he found the girl had got on my track-though how she did so is more than I can say he saw at once that it was the safest and best game to make up to her, and nicely he seems to have humbugged her. thought this business over and see that it is best for me to meet your wishes as I can. I am sorry now that I spoke so roughly when you came to my place; but you will understand that when s man has a secret that he has looked upon for nearly twenty years as being as good as a big mint of money, it riles him up more than a bit to find that it has just slipped him. But I think it is worth more than you offered me for it. There is no other man living who can prove what I can prove; there is no one else who can set this matter so straight that no one will be able as much as to whisper that Miss Corbyn has no right to her name.

"I think you have a right to value your testimony." Philip said. "but there are other ways of proving a merriage besides the testimony of one who was present at it."

"Not in this case. You and Miss Corbyn would not have taken this long journey if you could have done without me. Now, it won't suit me to go away to England for six months. As you saw, I have got a biggish business here, and it is growing, but I can do all you want me

Philip shook his head. . "It is your persons te-timony we want. If, you were to make an affidavit here we should have no end of trouble over it. We might have to send out a commisssion-in fact, it might give us no end of bother." "I am not going to make an affidavit, Mr. Clitheroe. But I tell you what, I will make you a fair offer, and what is more I will leave it to you and Miss Corbyn whather or not you think what I shall do will cover the ground, My offer in this : You shall write out a promise to give me two thousand pounds, if I thoroughly satisfy you, and you shall both sign your names to it." "Two thousand pounds is a very large sum,"

Philip said, gravely "It is less than half a year's rental of the estates," Morson replied. "I tell you; Miss Corbyn, my information is well worth the money .to Philip looked at Constance, who slightly nod-

I don't want any questioning or any bother, so before we come to the last point I will get you togive me your promise, Mr. Clitherce, and yours, Miss Corbyn, that the matter drops here, and that there are no questions asked, and that bygimes are treated as bygones Philip signed to Constance to come to the window apart.

" I don't know what the fellow is driving at, Constance, but I should think we might agree to that. If he can set this matter straight it is nothing to us what knavery he may have been at." " I quite agree with you, Philip,"

"We agree to your conditions." Philip said. as they returned to the middle of the room. "How do you propose to pay the money, sir? I know that you're's gentleman, but there is nothing like having these things settled straight-
